

Before enrolling in New Jersey's "Do Not Call" program, my family and I could never get through an evening without at least four or five unwanted, frequently rude calls from telemarketers. Now it's rare that we're called, and we're very grateful. I would hate to have the New Jersey program overturned and would openly oppose any move to do so.